Content: On the 28th of July 2015 the European Commission has presented the draft version of the new EU Strategy for the Alpine Region (EUSALP) valid for the five EU Alpine countries, Switzerland and Liechtenstein. The strategy will most likely be adopted by the European Council by the end of 2015. It will then be the 4th macro-regional strategy of the EU. What is different between this new strategy and the already existing strategies? What can it learn from its “older 3 sisters” with regards to a successful implementation? – These are the key questions of the conference.
