More than 150 people, elected officials and stakeholders in cross-border territories, national and European representatives met in Chamonix on 17-18 June on the occasion of the MOT General Assembly to debate on the impact of territorial reforms on cross-border cooperation. Michel Delebarre, former Minister of State, Senator of the North, has been re-elected president of the MOT, on the basis of renewed statutes for MOT, with a new “Advisory Committee” and a new “Board” (read page 3). At the foot of the Mont Blanc, “roof of Europe, roof of cooperation”, Eric Fournier, Mayor of Chamonix, welcomed the participants calling for greater recognition of cross-border spaces and in particular mountain areas, to build “consistent solidarity territories”.

Christian Dupessey, Rhône-Alpes Regional Counselor, Vice-president of the MOT, stressed the urgency of this support: “border regions are carrying a positive message on Europe to our fellow citizens, the improvement of the living conditions of the inhabitants being the first stake.” According to Jacques Lévy, Geographer, Professor at the École polytechnique fédérale of Lausanne, who moderated the debates throughout the three round tables: “It is the individual actors who build the spaces, and each actor is bigger than any space”. The local political decision on the border areas should therefore fully take into account the reality of the border. He thus stressed the “virtues” required for cross-border territorial development:

- the correct scale: the local has to manage the local
- the Republic: create a space of deliberation beyond the intergovernmental arrangements
- Democracy: give a voice to the people
- the imagination: invent territories beyond the borders.

[...] The first round table, focusing on the local level, put forward several experiments such as the Mont Blanc area, the Greater Geneva and the European Metropolis of Lille. Anna Karina Kolb, representing the Canton of Geneva, stressed that “cross-border cooperation is international cooperation in the field”. “It is necessary to go beyond our own rules in order to work together, out of a national vision to invent new and hybrid forms.

The second round table focused on the regional level and answered to other questions related to the reforms. According to Christian Dupessey, the distance from centres of decisions regarding the borders, due to new regions, does not mean that cross-border issues will be ‘less’ or ‘less well’ processed. On the contrary, this should reinforce the need for local and cross-border governance. The example of the Saarland, more autonomous than the French regions in terms of decision-making, illustrated the balance of the difference of competences on either side of the border, claiming that the creation of a single large region on the French side (Alsace-Champagne-Ardenne-Lorraine) could promote a more consistent and common voice towards Paris, Berlin and Brussels.

During the third round table focused on national and European levels, the representative of the European Commission, Agnès Montfret, underlined the outcomes of the last 25 years cross-border cooperation. “It is now necessary to show citizens that this Europe works, thanks to projects that match not only the vital functions of territories, but allow to increase investment in growth and employment”, she added.

Representing the European Parliament, Anne Sander, newly elected MOT Vice-president, enhanced the role of the European Parliament which wants to capitalize on the experience of networks such as MOT to adapt European legislation and place cross-border issues in the heart of its policies. She thus announced the creation of a new EP working-group on cross-border cooperation. Jean-Christophe Baudouin, Director ofterritorial strategies at the General Commission for Territorial Equality (CGET, France), welcomed the “swarming” of experiences. “We are in the heart of the construction of Europe; the success of the European project depends on the success of the cross-border projects!”

Elisa Vall, Director of the support to territories at the the Caisse des Dépôts (France), for her part highlighted the willingness of the Caisse des Dépôts to develop cross-border public investment. More info

Conference in Metz on French-German cross-border cooperation
A French-German ministerial conference, attended by French secretary of state for European affairs Harlem Désir and his German counterpart Michael Roth, both general-secretaries for French-German cooperation, took place on 6 and 7 July in Metz.

Two years after the Saarbrücken conference in July 2013, the event brought together elected representatives, institutional entities including the MOT, and representatives of civil society. In agreement with the regions and Länder concerned, the two ministers signed the Declaration of Metz, a joint declaration defining a common agenda for stepping up cooperation, in particular in the areas of integration of the employment and professional training markets.

According to Harlem Désir, the objective is to “make sure that the next generation is bilingual. [...] Here and there we see that some people want to re-erect borders. We must aim for the opposite. Borders are not walls, they are bridges.” More info

Inauguration of the cross-border KiosK Office
The KiosK Office, a unique French-German co-production, was inaugurated on 10 June 2015 in Strasbourg in the presence of Harlem Désir, French secretary of state for European affairs.

First meeting of the European Parliament working group on cross-border cooperation

“... charges for telephone calls made and messages sent from abroad – is anticipated with impatience by all border residents,” declared Anne Sander, MEP and MOT vice-president, on the occasion of the launch meeting of a new parliamentary working group on border questions on 24 June at the European Parliament. The inhabitants of border areas are the ones who experience day-by-day with European integration. They are also the ones who experience the limits of that integration [...].” The objective of the working group is to “convey the problems of border residents from the local level to Brussels.”

Annual network’s meeting and Technicians’ Platform

On 18 June, following the conference-debate, MOT annual bodies were the occasion of important votes for the association. New statutes, after several months working with members, were adopted. A new “Board” and a new “Advisory Committee” were elected.

New statutes allow to:
- Reaffirm the MOT status as a public multi-level cooperation tool;
- Take into account the new context for the cooperation and diversity of its actors;
- Consolidate the organisation and facilitate the functioning for its members and institutional partners.

According to these new statutes, the members then proceeded to the election of a new Board and a new “Advisory Committee” for a renewable term of three years. They allow a better geographical representation of the territories and levels of cooperation (local, regional, national and European), especially with the introduction of a new category of members: European and national parliamentarians.

A new scale of membership fees was adopted in order to adapt to the evolutions of the French territorial reform (notably the number and size of French border regions).

New members were presented at this occasion - bringing total membership to 66 - as well as the activity report 2014. The annual programme was adopted as well as a three-year programme 2015-2017 focused on three main objectives:

1. Support the cross-border cooperation stakeholders (operational and legal studies); network and capitalize experiences.
2. Contribute to the definition, the evolution and the implementation of cross-border policies regarding the various territorial levels.
3. Represent the interests of the territories at European level; develop activities on the overseas and at international level.

The MOT inaugurates its online documentation portal!

After more than five years of work, the MOT is inaugurating its online documentation portal - available in French - and opening up its documentation centre to specialist users.

It provides access to more than 3600 documents on cross-border cooperation, border and cross-border territories, territorial cooperation and, more generally, spatial planning. More than 800 documents are in English.

The online portal enables targeted document searches. All visitors can use the search function and browse the bibliographic descriptions, but downloading of electronic documents is restricted to network members and, on request only, to students and researchers. The documentation centre itself has a collection of more than 2700 hard-copy documents. It is accessible to the same specialist users, by appointment. The collection is divided into four categories: Borders and Territories, European Union, Topics, and Atlas. Access the portal

Fourth report of the Observatoire des Territoires
The report “Qualité de vie, habitants, territoires” (quality of life, inhabitants, territories) delivered to the French Minister of Housing, Territorial Equality and Rural Affairs on 11 May 2015, is available for downloading from the Observatoire des Territoires website [in French]. It consists of two parts:
- a set of topical data sheets providing detailed, updated analyses of the major drivers of the French territories,
- a dossier on the quality of life.

The 2014 report is accompanied by a methodology guide intended for local entities wishing to conduct an assessment of the quality of life in their territories.
Cross-border cooperation is discussed in the document from the point of view of the observation of cross-border territories.
