Launch of the Greater Region’s new geoportal

More user-friendly and better suited to players in the Greater Region but above all to the general public is how the new version of the Greater Region’s geoportal, which was officially presented on 23 May, in the presence of Camille Gira, Luxembourg’s Secretary of State for sustainable Development and Infrastructure, can be summed up. A showcase for territorial observation in the Greater Region, since 2010 the geoportal has allowed people to view the geographical data produced by the geographical information system on diverse topics (territorial development, the environment, tourism, mobility within the Greater Region and the labour market).

The new version, which is more intuitive, helps to highlight the progress made and the concrete advances that have led to this new geoportal. The latter, which has been developed in cooperation with the Luxembourg Centre for Government Information Technologies, the Luxembourg Land Registry and Topography Administration and the Rhineland-Palatinate Landesamt für Vermessung und Geobasisinformation, makes it possible to capture cross-border flows and territorial dynamics with greater accuracy than before.

At this event, the participants, including the MOT, were able to address the issue of territorial observation within the Greater Region more broadly. They stressed the need to reinforce the role of territorial observation in political decision-making, notably at the cross-border level, with the maps providing “better visibility of the dynamics of territorial development and facilitating the interpretation of statistical indicators”. Encouraging young people’s cross-border mobility in the Greater Region

This is the aim of the project FagA/Centre d’aide à la mobilité transfrontalière (CAMT – Centre for Assistance with Cross-Border Mobility) launched on 1 July 2016 in the SaarMoselle Eurodistrict. The territories of the Greater Region (particularly Saarland, Rhineland-Palatinate and the catchment area of the Nancy-Metz education authority) display great disparities in terms of demographic development (youth unemployment, need for qualified labour, etc.). Focusing mainly on young people, the target group as they represent future labour, the project aims to increase their likelihood of having practical cross-border experiences in the form of internships and periods of training in the neighbouring country. The objective is therefore to foster and reinforce the employability of these young people on the cross-border labour market, while at the same time promoting intercultural links.

In order to facilitate the different stages of participation in the mobility programme, the CAMT gives the young participants practical help (with administrative and financial dossiers, assessment of and capitalising on skills acquired, looking for companies and transport, accommodation and catering solutions) as well as financial help (transport, accommodation and meals). Finalisation of the report of the cross-border obstacles working group

On 30 May 2017 at the Committee of the Regions in Brussels, the fifth meeting of the intergovernmental working group on innovative solutions to obstacles to cross-border cooperation was held.

Following on from Luxembourg’s proposal in 2015 concerning the creation of a new European legal tool, the European Cross-Border Convention (ECBC), the group’s objective was to continue with work in this direction.

This meeting, in which the MOT, in its capacity as secretary of the working group co-chaired by France and Luxembourg, took part, made it possible to finalise the working group’s report.

To this end, various discussions took place aimed at having a better understanding of the tool in order to be able to send the findings of the group’s work to the European Commission. The latter will then have to decide on the follow-up to the proposal in its communication on the Cross-Border Review scheduled for September 2017.

In addition to the proposal for a new legal tool and the proposal to create a multilevel European platform for the resolution of obstacles to cooperation, the meeting was also an opportunity to present different case studies in order to gain a better understanding of the tool and its value added.

While the importance and benefits of cross-border cooperation were highlighted again, the persistence of obstacles, the real heart of the problem and subject of the work undertaken, stimulated many further discussions. The presentation of case studies during the meeting was thus a chance to underscore the need to pursue the work on cross-border obstacles.

Lastly, the meeting highlighted the consensus among the working group’s members on the new tool as the “missing piece” in the range of mechanisms aimed at overcoming obstacles. It is important to act at all levels: on each border (example of the final report on the updating process of the work of the Franco-Belgian parliamentary working group – see page 4), at national level in coordination with neighbouring countries (example of the forum developed by the MOT); and at European level, with a multilevel platform designed to develop synergies between these different actions.

A label of territorial expertise for the MOT

The MOT has been awarded the "International territorial expertise" label by the Ministry of Europe and European Affairs within the framework of the programme to support territorial authorities’ thematic cooperation (PACT3). Under this programme, a label may be awarded to bodies that have demonstrated their capacity to provide technical assistance to territorial authorities in the implementation of decentralised cooperation projects, as well as to territorial authorities in recognition of their particular competencies. The MOT's submission was selected in respect of "cross-border cooperation". A new call for applications has been launched, the deadline being 17 October 2017.

Cerdanya cross-border abattoir up and running

The cross-border abattoir in Ur (French Cerdanya) has been operating since the start of April. The facility promoted by Cerdanya District Council (Spain) and the Bourg-Madame abattoir (France) has been 50% financed by the two partners and European funds, with a total cost of €5.4 million. Some 300 livestock farmers and butchers on both sides of the border will benefit from the new facility. Three people from the Bourg-Madame abattoir are working at the abattoir. Initially, the facility will process 600 tonnes of meat, rising to 1,000 tonnes over the next few years. Currently, it operates three times a week from 4am till midday.

The MOT’s assignment in Brazzaville

The MOT made a contribution in Brazzaville at a conference of the International Association of Francophone Mayors (AIMF), in a workshop on regional cooperation among Central African local authorities. The workshop helped to identify the factors of success and obstacles to cross-border cooperation, as well as providing a guide to the role of the different players involved in cooperation. This contribution was part of a broader assignment to assist the AIMF in developing local cross-border cooperation between Central African countries.

Sixth meeting of the parliamentary group on cross-border cooperation

The coordination of social security systems

On 31 May 2017, Anne Sander, MEP and Vice-President of the MOT, organised the sixth meeting of the working group on cross-border cooperation, which addressed the issue of the coordination of social security systems in the context of the revision underway of Regulation No. 883/2004, which lays down the common rules required for this coordination.

Presented on 13 December 2016 by the European Commission, this proposed revision is aimed at modernising the current system in order to facilitate labour mobility, ensure fairness for those who move and better combat abuses and fraud. This revision also aims to simplify a number of cumbersome administrative procedures, but without weakening the rights of cross-border workers.

While this proposed revision was greeted favourably by the players present, some questions remain, notably regarding the issue of the payment of unemployment benefits and the support given to cross-border workers.

In addition, this meeting enabled Guillaume Balas, the rapporteur on the proposed revision, to set out his position on the text and the timetable for the report to the European Parliament, and also to talk with the representatives of cross-border workers present and the experts from Luxembourg’s representation, with the latter emphasising the importance and sensitivity of this revision for their territory which hosts a large proportion of frontier workers.

The difference in the level of unemployment benefits between France and Germany, as well as the failure to adapt the education and training programmes for foreign workers, were also highlighted by the representative of the PAMINA Eurodistrict, Frédéric Siebenhaar.

Lastly, Anne Sander concluded by talking about the importance of taking account of the concerns and specificities of cross-border workers in the forthcoming discussions about the revision. It will be important to carefully analyse the consequences of the proposed changes, to consult the stakeholders on the ground and, following on from that, to propose tools to properly support cross-border workers.

The end of roaming charges in Europe

On 15 June 2017, the EU "sounded the death knell" for roaming charges in the whole of the European Union. Up till now, connecting to one’s network through a local operator gave rise to surcharges for people not from the country concerned. From mid-June onwards, using one’s mobile phone abroad (in the EU), to make or receive calls, send messages or use the Internet, will, in theory, no longer generate additional charges. In a joint declaration, Antonio Tajani, Joseph Muscat and Jean-Claude Juncker recalled that “the end of roaming charges is a true European success story” and is another important step towards building a European digital society.
